My Visit to the Children's Garden at The Morton Arboretum

Winter

I will be visiting the Children's Garden at The Morton Arboretum. I am going to play outside and explore nature.

I can borrow a Sensory Bag at the Visitor Center, in the Children's Garden or by asking someone who wears a name tag. The Sensory Bag has headphones, fidget tools, and other things I can use to feel calm if I am overwhelmed in the Children's Garden.

When I arrive, someone who works or volunteers at the Children's Garden may welcome my group at the entrance. If I need help or get separated from my group, I can ask someone with a name tag for help.

I can look at the map of the Children's Garden or use the activity choice board in the Sensory Bag to help me decide where I want to go.

Some parts of the Children's Garden may be closed if the area is getting ready for winter.
That is okay, I still have much to explore.

While exploring the Children's Garden, I can walk on different surfaces like the sidewalk,
boardwalks, woodchips,
or snow!

If there is snow on the ground, I can look for animal tracks. I can try to guess what animals might have left the tracks.

I can go down slides and climb tree roots. I can wait for my turn if other children want to use the slide, too.

I can use the bathrooms in the Children's Garden. They are located right by the picnic tables.

I can see water bubbling in the middle of Wonder Pond.
Maybe I will see a squirrel or a bird having a sip of water.

I can go on rope bridges or climb up to the tree houses. Other children may come behind me, but I can take my time to get to the other side.

If I need a break, I can find a quieter area of the Children's Garden and rest on a bench. I can also use my headphones or other calming tools.

If I get hungry, I can have a snack and warm up in the Visitor Center or go to the picnic area.

When my visit is over, I will leave the Children's Garden with my group and return the Sensory Bag to someone with a name tag. I had a great day exploring nature! Knowing what to expect made my visit fun and easy.
